

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

THE work, now at length completed, has cost us many years of labour, —labour that has often seemed almost hopeless.

A very slight inspection of it will show that it aims at a far higher standard of accuracy and completeness than any of its English predecessors. Indeed, it can hardly be said to have had any predecessor in its own kind; for no English-Latin Dictionary hitherto published has even professed to give any account of the use of the words set down, their synonymical distinctions, the niceties connected with their employment by classical writers, with such remarks and cautions as a cursory glance at any important word in the following work will prove that it has at least attempted to supply.

The title-page states that it is founded upon the German-Latin Dictionary of DR. CHARLES ERNEST GEORGES, of which the first edition was published at Leipsic in 1833; the third, in 1845. That work consists of two octavo volumes, usually bound together in one very thick volume of 1820 pages. Dr. Georges had a predecessor of great merit in DR. FREDERICK CHARLES KRAFT. As, however, the only edition of Kraft's Dictionary that we have consulted is the fourth edition ('re-modelled and enlarged'), which appeared at Stuttgart in 1843, we cannot state exactly how far Dr. Georges is indebted to the earlier editions of Kraft's work, which, in its present form, is the most copious of all the German-Latin Dictionaries, consisting of two very thick octavo volumes, which contain respectively 1426 and 1509 pages. Though we have occasionally consulted Kraft with benefit, we are decidedly of opinion that Georges is considerably superior to him in clearness of arrangement, and in the combination of sufficient fulness with a sound principle of selection; nor do we hesitate to give the preference to Georges even on the ground of scrupulous accuracy, though the occasional instances of inaccuracy that we have detected in Kraft are very rare exceptions to the general character of his work. Dr. Mühlmann, who published a German-Latin Dictionary in 1845, is almost entirely dependent upon Georges.

With respect to other helps, the 'Anti-barbarus' of Krebs, Döderlein's 'Synonymical Hand-book,' and Freund's 'Wörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache,' have been our constant companions. We have also derived considerable assistance from Bonnell's 'Lexicon Quintilianæum;' and have often consulted with advantage Haase's notes to Reisig's 'Vorlesungen,' Hand's 'Tursellinus,' and Krüger's 'Grammatik der Lateinischen Sprache.' Amongst other works, of which we have occasionally made use, we may mention Billerbeck's 'Flora Classica,' Kraus's 'Medicinisches Lexicon,' Ernesti's 'Lexicon Technologiæ Latinorum Rhetoricæ,' with Crusius's 'Vollständiges Wörterbuch' to Cæsar, and Billerbeck's to Cornelius Nepos.

About 150 pages of the work were printed off before either of us became aware that the other was engaged in the same task, and was drawing his materials from the same sources. For that portion of the work Mr. Arnold alone is answerable. When a joint publication was resolved upon, the portion (A—C), which Mr. Riddle had but recently sent to press, was withdrawn, and we exchanged the materials that each had prepared for the half which was to be executed by the other; but, to speak generally, Mr. Arnold is responsible for the first half, from A to K (inclusive), and for the letter U; Mr. Riddle, for the remainder. Mr. Arnold has to thank W. Frädersdorff, Esq., of the University of Berlin, for very useful assistance rendered to him during the progress of the work. Mr. Riddle has also some acknowledgements to make to the same gentleman; and is still more indebted to his own brother, the Rev. John B. Riddle, M.A., of Wadham College, Oxford.

We are very conscious that the work is still far from perfect ; but we feel a just confidence, founded upon the excellence of Georges' Dictionary, and a consciousness of our own diligence, that it possesses the general merit of strict accuracy, and is the only English-Latin Dictionary that a student can consult with the reasonable hope of finding what he wants, and the certainty of being able to trust what he finds.

POSTSCRIPT TO THE THIRD EDITION

It has been judged expedient to annex an Index of Proper Names to the Lexicon, instead of publishing one in a separate form. Such an Index has been appended by Professor Anthon to his American reprint of our work, and we have gladly availed ourselves of his labours in this edition of the Lexicon. It "has been prepared," as the Professor tells us, "from the best sources ; but more particularly from Quicherat's 'Vocabulaire des Noms Géographiques, Mythologiques et Historiques de la Langue Latine,' Mühlman's 'Verzeichniss der Geographischen, Mythologischen und Geschichtlichen Namen,' Freund's 'Wörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache,' Klotz's 'Handwörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache' (as far as published), Sharpe's 'Nomenclator Poeticus,' Leusden's 'Onomasticon,' &c., and Bischoff and Möller's 'Vergleichendes Wörterbuch der alten, mittleren, und neuen Geographie.'"

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS.

qs = aliquis.
 qd = aliquid.
 cs = alicujus.
 ci = alicui.
 qm = aliquem.
 qam = aliquam.
 qo = aliquo.
 qâ = aliquâ.
 qrm = aliquorum.
 cs, ci, &c., alone = the gen. or dat. of a person.
 cs rei, ci rei = the gen. or dat., respectively, of a thing.
 aby = any body.
 atg = any thing.
 cmly = commonly.

Inscript. = Inscriptions. Inscript. Orell. = Orelli's Collection of Latin Inscriptions.
JUt. = Juris Consultis (with reference to technical terms of Roman law).

* prefixed to a word or phrase means that it is not found in a Classical author, but is the best substitute the compilers can give. Very many phrases to which this note is prefixed are from Muretus, Ruhnken, Wyttienbach, &c. Kraft has been very industrious in collecting these.

The meaning of a phrase printed thus: See 'make way for,' is, See the phrase 'make way for,' under WAY.

The initial letter of the word at the head of an article represents that word. The 3rd sing. of a verb, or the plur. of a substantive, is represented thus (supposing the word to be 'DRIVE') d.'s.

ALKALINE, 'calcinus (t. t.): e. g. *sal alcalinus. ALL, omnis (every, all: pl. omnes, all, without exception: opp. nulli, pauci, aliquot, &c.).—cuncti (all collectively, considered as really united: opp. dispersi, reijuncti. Hence in the sing. it is used only with collective nouns: e. g. senatus cunctus)—universi, universi (all, as united in our conception: opp. singuli, unusquisque. It excludes exceptions like omnes, but with more reference to the whole, than to the separate units that compose it).—omnis Italia, geographically: Italia cuncta, fig. = all the inhabitants of Italy.—ALL is also expressed strongly by two negatives, nemo non, nullus non, nemo with quin.—e. g. all see it, nemo non videt: all did it, nemo est, quin fecerit. | All = each, quisque, quisque (each one, the predicate being asserted of each and all alike).—quidvis (any one, without selection, but one only).—unusquisque (each single one). Thus; in all places, quoque loco. I had rather suffer all manner of evils, quidvis malo pati. | When ALL stands with an adj. to denote a whole class, the Romans generally made each individual prominent by the use of the superlative with quisque. All the best men, optimus quisque. | ALL = whoever, whatever, quicumque: que: a. who are engaged, will know, quicumque prelio interfuit, sciet.—Sic quod (with est or habeo) with the gen. A. the time I can spare fm my forensic labours, quod mihi de forensi labore tempora datur: I sent to the Prætors to bring you all the soldiers they had, ad Prætores misi, ut militum quod haberent, ad vos ducerent. | ALL = any, after without (e. g. 'without all doubt'), ullus (for which the Comic writers and Or. sts use omnis). If a negative precedes, aliquis or omnia. | All in all, or ALL used substantively, may be translated. In various ways: e. g. his son is a. in a. to him, filius ei unus omnia est; filium fert or gerat in oculis: he has lost all, evensus est fortunæ omnibus. | AT ALL: omnino. prorsus: after negatives, nihil (the negative being untransl.). Never at a., omnino nunquam: nothing at a., omnino nihil: nowhere at a., omnino nusquam: hardly, if at a., vix, aut omnino non: not much, if at a., non multum, aut nihil omnino. | At all times, omni tempore. semper. | With CAN, COULD. A. I can, quantum possum or (if relating to the future) potero. I would strive a. that ever I could, quantum maxime possem conenderem. A. that I can lie, or is in my power, quantum in me erit (relating to the future). He did a. he could to overthrow the state, temp., quantum in ipso fuisset, evitit: to labour a. I can, quantumcumque possum, laborare. | TO BE ALL ONE. It is a. one to me, nihil mea interest or referit (if it is a. one to Caius, nihil Caii interest or referit).—qd negligo, non or nihil curo: qd mihi non curat est: it is a. one to him what people think of him, negligit, non or nihil curat, quid de se quisque sentiat. | FOR ALL (1) = although, VID. (2) in spite of, adversus: he is a fool for a. his age and grey hairs, stultus est adversus ætatem et capitis canities. Sis by in with abi. (e. g. nescitabantur tamen in tantā deformitate, for a. their pitiable appearance): for a. that, tamen; nihilo secius; nihilo minus. | Whilst—all the while (as used to point out the co-existence of two states, &c., that should not co-exist): quum Interea or quum quō: e. g. belum subito exarsit,—quum Ligarius, domum spectans, nullo se negotio implicari passus est ('whilst L. all the while', &c.). | ALL ALONG, semper (always): continenter (uninterruptedly; incessantly). | ALL AND EACH, omnes ac singuli; singuli universique. | ALL, WITHOUT EXCEPTION, omnes ad unum, or (less commonly) ad unum omnes (here unum is neuter, but now and then agrees with the subj.; as, naves onerariæ omnes ad unam sunt exceptæ, C. Lentul. in C. Ep

12, 14, 3). ¶ NOT AT ALL (in answers), non.—minime vero. minime . . . quidem: also imo. imo vero. imo enim vero. imo potius (with an assertion of the opposite of that which the question implies). Instead of non only, non with the verb of the question is only used: non irata est? not at all! non sum irata!—don't you believe this? an tu hæc non credis? not at all! minime vero!—num igitur percamus? not at all! minime vos quidem!—sicine huic decipis? not at all: it is he who is deceiving me, imo enim vero hic me decipit.—No; not so at a. non ita est. It is not so—not at a. non est ita!—non est profecto. ¶ ALL THE BETTER, tanto melior! ALSO, etiam, quoque (quoq., which always follows its word, is merely a copulative particle, and can only render a single notion prominent: etiam is augmentative, it enhances what has been said: it can also relate to a whole sentence).—The pron. idem is used where different properties are attributed to the same subject or object. Musci quondam lidem poetæ (were also poets).—et ipse (when what is asserted of the person or thing in question is at the same time asserted, by implication, of other persons or things. Darius cum vincti suos videret, mori voluit et ipse, i.e. as well as they; or with them).—Item (in like manner; likewise; just as: augur cum fraire item augure: literæ—a patre vehementes, ab amici item).—præterea, Insuper (besides; moreover).—Nec non in the prose of the golden age connects sentences only, not nouns. On the occasional use of et for etiam (in Cic.), see HAND'S TURNELLINUS. || And also, et etiam, et quoque (generally with a word between; else atque etiam should be used).

ALTAR, ara (g. t. whether made of stone or of earth, turf, &c.).—altaria, lum (a high altar: an ara with an ap. aratus for burnt-offerings. altare, altarium, in sing.

belong to a later age). A little a., arula: to build an a., aram statuere (g. t.). deo facere aram (to a deity). To dedicate an a., aram dicare, consecrare (C.). To swear before an a., aram tenentem jurare (the person who swore, touched the altar). To make any swear before an a., altariibus admotum iurajurando adigere qm. To fly to the a's, ad (in) aras confugere: to drag fm the a's, ab ipsis aris detrahere: and slay, ab altariibus ad necem transferre.—The sacrament of the altar, *cœna Domini; *cœna or mensa sacra; eucharistia (Eccl.). See SACRAMENT.

ALTAR-CLOTH, *tegmen altarium.

ALTER, TRANS, mutare.—commutare (qd in qâ re, of a thing that exists independently, as a house, &c.: de qâ re, of what does not exist independently, as manners, customs, &c.).—immutare (mly of an entire change).—submutare (of a partial change).—novare (to give alth a new shape).—emendare, corrigere (improve by an alteration); emendi, may be said of removing one or more errors, corrig. of making what was altogether bad good).

—variare (to vary by changing: e.g. fortunam, animos, &c.).—invertere (to turn round: give a wrong turn to: e.g. corrupt the character).—interpolare (to falsify alth by altering its appearance).—To alter alth written, a speech, &c., orationem, &c. rescribere: a will, testamentum mutare (g. t.); test. rescindere (to cancel it; of the testator: test. resignare is, to open a will). To a. a line of march, iter or viam flectere; iter convertere: a plan, consilium mutare or commutare: one's life, manner of life, morum institutorumque mutationem facere (opp. instituta sua tenere): one's custom, consuetudinem mutare: one's disposition, novum sibi induere ingenium (L. 3, 33): one's character, morum mutationem or commutationem facere (g. t.).—mores emendare (for the better): mores invertere (for the worse).—what can still be altered, quod interum est: what is done, cannot be altered, factum infectum fieri non potest (T.). || To be altered. See ALTER, INTRA.

ALTER, INTRA. mutari, commutari, immutari (SYN. in preced. word).—variare (to change backwards and forwards: eply of the weather).—converti (to change round, whether for better or for worse: of fortune, place, &c.). To change of men, their characters, &c., se invertere (for the worse): in mellius mutari, ad bonam frugem se recipere (for the better). See also to a. the character, in ALTER, TRANS.—Not to a. sibi constare, a se non decedere. He has not altered, non alius est eo fuit; est idem qui fuit semper. Antiquum obinet. He is quite altered, commutatus est totus. You must begin to-day to be an altered man, he dies aliam vitam defert, alios mores postulat (Ter.). Men are altered, homines alii facti sunt. Times and opinions are altered, magna facta est rerum et animorum commutatio. Every thing is altered, vera sunt omnia. Which cannot now be altered, quod non integrum est.

ALTERATION, mutatio, commutatio, immutatio, conversio (SYN. see verbs under ALTER, TRANS.).—varietas, vicissitudo (the first more accidental, the last regular). A. of the weather, cœli varietas: a's of fortune, fortunæ vicissitudines. A. of opinion, mutatio sententiæ: receptus sententiæ (retraction).—to wake an a., mutationem or commutationem ea rei facere (See ALTER, TRANS): to cause an a., commutationem ei rei afferre: to undergo or be subject to an a., mutationem habere: to plan or endeavour to effect an a., mutationem moliri. An a. of circumstances is taking place, commutatio rerum accidit. A. of colour, mutatio coloris: of plan, consilii: of the state of things, rerum conversio.

ALTERCATION, altercatio (a contest of words with more or less of heat).—Jurgium (an angry quarrel concluded with abusive words, when neither party will listen to reason). To have an a. with aby, altercari cum quo; verbis cum quo concertare: jurgio certare cum quo: to begin an a., alterci incipere (cum quo); causam jurgii inferre. I get into an a. with aby, oritur mihi (de qâ re) altercatio cum quo. A great part of the day was taken up by an a. between Lentulus and Caninius, dies magnâ ex parte consumptus altercatione Lentuli et Caninii. A's took place in the senate, altercationes in senatu factæ (C.). No a. ever took place with greater clamours, nulla altercatio clamoribus habita majoriibus (C.).

ALTERNATE, v. alternare (cum quo): alternare vices (O.).—qd qâ re variare (e.g. otium labore; laborem otio).

ALTERNATE, adj. alternus. A. acts of kindness, mutua officia. Beneficia ultro citroque data et accepta.

[On a days, alternis diebus. A. angles, *anguli sibi oppositi.

ALTERNATELY, alternis (abl. of adj.: Verr. not C. see after the other).—in vicem, per vicem (when several follow immediately after others)—simul etiam in vicem, in vicem each other alternately (C.).—vicissim (in turn; on the other hand) does not belong here: and vicibus belongs to poetry and late prose. mutuo is 'reciprocally', 'mutually'.

ALTERNATION, alternatio (Post-class.).—vicēs (pl.), vicissitudo—permutatio (change), varietas. A.'s offortune, fortune vicissitudines, varietas: of the seasons, temporum vicissitudo, varietas: of day and night, vicissitudines dierum, nocturnique; vicissitudines dierum nocturnaque (C.).

ALTERNATIVE. There is no word for it; but the notion may be expressed in various ways. 'Peace or war is our only alternative,' inter bellum et pacem nihil medium est (C.). 'Either he must be punished by the state, or we enslaved: there is no other alternative,' res in id discrimen adducta est, utrum ille poenas reipublice luit, an nos servitium (C.). To offer any as a 'geminam conditionem' ci proponere.

ALTHOUGH, etsi (= 'even if,' the concession made is here simply a supposition: if considered as really existing, the indic. is used; if merely as possible, the subjunctive).—etiamsi (a fuller and stronger etsi = 'yes even if,' 'even if'). Etiamsi and etsi differ nearly as 'though' and 'although'.—tamen etsi or tamen etsi (gives prominence to the improbability of the co-existence of the supposition and the asserted consequence: it is often followed by tamen, which has then the force of 'yet nevertheless').—quamquam (= 'however much' the supposition really exists: the real existence of the supposition being granted, it takes the indicative in the best writers)—quamvis ('however much' you, the person addressed, may possibly imagine the concession to exist really: hence in Cic. only with the subj.).—quoniam and quoniam can only be used with adjectives, adverbs, and verbs, whose notion can be supposed to exist in a heightened degree of intensity.—licet (= 'granted the thing be so: let it be so, if you like' allowing a supposition, the correctness of which the speaker does not in any degree maintain in himself, but allows the person addressed to maintain if he pleases: it is an impersonal verb, and takes the subj. governed by it omitted. It may occur in other tenses; thus, detraxit auctori multum fortuna licet: and C. has quamvis licet. N. D. 3, 36; Tusc. 4, 21).—ut 'Though' correcting or limiting a previous statement, or adding to it some circumstance to be kept in view in the application of it, is quamquam, less frequently etsi; the conjunction standing at the head of a sentence, which is then more than a mere subordinate clause. Thus confer te ad Manium: infer patris bellum. Quamquam quid ego te invitem, &c. (C.). De, do, ponas temeritatis mem: etsi quis fuit illa temeritas (C.). Quum (with subj.), properly denotes the co-existence of two apparently inconsistent states, &c.—Ut has also the meaning of although (ut desint vires, tamen est laudanda voluntas. O.), and no of 'although—not' (e.g. ne sit summum malum dolor, maius certum est. C.). A.—yet: sic ut—ita (ut quies certaminum erat, ita ab apparatu operum ac munitionum nihil cessatum. L.).

ALTITUDE, altitudo.—excoelitas.—sublimitas (all three proper, and fig.).—proceritas (proper, 'tallness,' bright in reference to growth. See SYN. in HIGN).—elatio (fig. elevation: e.g. animi). | A. of a mountain, altitudo or excoelitas montis; or, if the highest point is moist, fastigium.

ALTOGETHER, | completely, &c. prorsus (opp. 'in some degree,' or 'almost'; quite, without exception).—omnino (opp. magnum ex parte, &c.: completely, quite; also 'altogether'—in one lot (e.g. venedere), opp. separatim. Pila).—plane (quite: opp. penes: e.g. plane par: vix—vel plane nullo modo. C.).—in or per omnes partes, per omnia (in every respect).—peritus (through and through; thoroughly; quite: e.g. amittere, perspicere, cognoscere, &c., opp. to magna ex parte, and to 'superficially').—funditus (from the foundations; utterly: expi with verbs of perishing, destroying, overthrowing, defeating, rejecting, depriving). A.—in great measure, omnino aut magna ex parte.—With ref. to a person, altogether may be translated by the adj. totus. 'He is altogether made up of falsehood and deceit,' totus ex fraude et mendacio factus est. | All together, cuncti (all collected together: opp. dispersi).—universi (all taken together, wherever they may chance to be: opp. singuli). | in

ANGLE, talus. Reaching to the a.'s, talaris (e. g. tunica).

AND, et (= kai: joins words and notions, each of which is considered independently, and as of equal importance). — atque, ac (add what is of somewhat more importance: ac not before vowels or h: very seldom before g. C. Fam. 12, 7) — que (= et: joins a word closely to another as an appendage to it). 'And' at the beginning of indignant questions is et (et quinquam dubitabit, &c. ?) || AND is often untranslated: 1) when it unites single notions of the following kind: a) in certain combinations of frequent occurrence: e. g. 'horse and man,' equi viri: 'men and women,' viri mulieres. So ventis remis, &c. b) Before the last term of an enumeration, when the preceding terms are not connected by 'and.' 'Our country was preserved by my labours, counsels, and dangers,' patria laboribus, consiliis, periculis meis servata est. 'There were present Greeks, Romans, and others,' aderant Græci, Romani, alii. 2) The particle 'and' is, however, inserted before the last term of an enumeration, it being omitted before the others, when that expresses the whole class, to which the preceding terms belong. c) Between the names of consuls it is sometimes omitted. 2) When 'and' connects whole sentences. In English we often connect by 'and' sentences that relate to different times, or the latter of which is a consequence of the former, or describes a subsequent action of a person mentioned in the former. Such sentences are in Latin either, a) connected by the rel. qui: e. g. 'a messenger came and announced,' venit nuntius, qui nuntiabat: or, b) the subordinate sentence is turned into a participial clause: 'he came forward and spoke thus,' in medium prodians hæc locutus est: 'he left the city and retired to his country house,' urbe relicta in villam se recepit: or, c) causal particles are used, when statements stand to each other in the relation of cause and effect, occasion and consequent action, &c.: e. g. 'Xanthippus was sent to aid the Carthaginians, and defended himself bravely,' Xanthippus, quum Carthaginiensibus auxilio misus esset, fortiter se defendit. 'I saw him, and immediately recognized him,' postquam eum aspexi, illico cognovi. || AND SO; AND ACCORDINGLY: itaque, ite que only (to intimate the rapid succession of the second

conf. || AND AS IT WERE, et quasi, or less emly tanquam inerer atque (ac) quasi or tanquam, Stüren-berg. || AND ALSO, et—quoque (e. g. et sarmenta quoque in merce sunt)—nec non (to connect sentences: they should stand separately. They are not used in the best prose to connect two nouns like a simple et). If two adjectives or other attributions are spoken of et nouns, 'and also' is translated by idemque, et idem (e. g. musicus idemque philosophus). || AND YET, et tamen; atque (at the beginning of a sentence). || AND THAT, et, isae: if 'and that' relates to a verb or to a whole sentence, idque should be used (negotium magnum est navigare, idque mense Quintili). || AND NOT, nec or neque; et nō; ac non (nec or neque when the negative refers to the whole of the second sentence: et non or ac non, when it belongs more particularly to a single word or notion in it or when the 'and' is very emphatic. ac non only when the notion in the second clause corrects, or is opposed to, a notion in the first: e. g. 'we must use reason, and not follow the distorted rule of custom,' adhibenda est ratio, nec utendum pravissima consuetudinis regula: 'it would be tedious and is not necessary to relate,' longum est et non necessarium commemorare. 'I would write to you at greater length, if the thing needed words, and did not speak for itself,' pluribus verbis ad te scriberem, si res verba desideraret, ac non pro se ipsa loqueretur). — IN A in a sentence as, 'it is A and not B,' it would be quite wrong to express the 'and' in Latin: e. g. tuā culpā factum est, non meā (not tuā culpā factum est, et non meā). || AND NOT RATHER, ac non or ac non potius. || AND NOTHING, and nothing; AND NEVER, ne, nec quicquam, nec quidquam, nec umquam, if the negative belongs to the whole sentence; et nemo, et nihil, et numquam, when the negative belongs to the single word. || In sentences of parallel construction, e. g. 'A does this, and B does that,' &c., the 'and' should be translated by autem, which is a weak adverbial particle: e. g. voluptates impellere, quo velit; unde autem velit, deducere.—versutus eos appello, quorum mens ceteris versatur, callidos autem, quorum mens—usu comestuit.

ARUNDINACEOUS, arundineus (arundinaceus, once in Plin.).

AS, I) || As a particle of comparison: ac, atque (after words denoting equality, similarity, &c.: æque, idem, par, &c.): quam (if exact equality is not meant, but excess or defect). Thus if a negatives precedes æque, &c., quam must be used. not ac, atque, for the negation destroys the exact equality. Horog. Cæs. B. G. 2, 6).—et, ut, and (after idem) ac, atque, et, qui, seld. cum (as in Sall. and Tac.). We cannot maintain friendship unless we love our friends as ourselves, amicitiam tueri non possumus, nisi æque amicos et nosmet ipsos diligamus: in what a situation our affairs are, you know as well as I do, quo in loco res nostras sint, juxta morum omnes intelligitis: they go away the same men as they came, iidem abeunt, qui venerunt. || After such, so great, so many (talis, tantus, tot), not quam but qualis, quantus, quot. He is such as he ever was, talis est, qualis semper fuit. || In forms of protestation and swearing: 'as true as'; ita or sic with the subj. followed by ut, with the subj. if a wish is to be expressed, the indic. if an assertion is to be made: 'as true as I live, I shudder', &c., ita vivam (or ita deos mihi velim propitios), ut—perhorresco; or (with its vivam thrown in parenthetically) perhorresco, ita vivam, &c. 'As true as I am alive, I should like', &c., ita vivam (or ita mihi omnia, quæ opto, contingant) ut velim, &c. || As (so) WELL—AS: et—et; tam—tam; quum—tum (with quum—tum, the clause with quum is the more general, that with tum the more special statement). Sit ut—sic; non minus—quam. [§ 10.] tam—quam in this sense does not belong to the plain age. || Not so—AS, non tam—quam. The Romans waged some wars not so successfully as bravely, Romani bella quædam non tam feliciter quam fortiter gesserunt (or Romani bella quædam fortius quam feliciter, or magis fortiter quam feliciter gesserunt).—Cæsar is not so prudent as he is brave, Cæsar fortior est quam prudenter (which allows him some prudence: magis fortis est quam prudens or fortis est quam prudens. The form fortior est quam prudenter is that which belongs to the best age). || As—so: ut—ita or sic; quemadmodum—eodem modo: quemadmodum—sic; velut—sic or ita. || As MUCH AGAIN, alterum tantum: this is as big again as its. || As much altero tanto majus est. || As MANY AS (= all who), quotcumque: AS MUCH AS, quantumcumque. || As SOON AS: simul et ac (æque), simul ut. also simul alone.—ut. ut primum. quum primum.—ubi (when).—postquam (after). [§ 11.] All these take the perfect indic. in narrative where we should use the pluperf.; but when repeated actions or continued states are described, the principal verb being in the imperfect, the verb with postquam, &c. may be in the pluperf.—[simulacrum temeritat—reperiebatur. Np.] AS (= as if), AS IF: tamquam. I depart from life as from an inn, ex villa discedo, tamquam ex hospitio.

II) As a particle of explanation. || As if; just as if: tamquam: tamquam si: veluti; haud secus ac si: non aliter quam si (all with subj.): the men flocked together as if something of great importance were to hand, tamquam summi momenti res ageretur, ita concurrerunt homines. Sit an abl. abs. is used: the enemy pursued as if the victory were already won, hostes insecuti, quasi partâ jam victoriâ. || As if FORSOOTH: AS IF (ironically): as if forsooth I thought this, quasi vero id putem. || To denote a property: tamquam (expressing equality in point of manner and degree: 'as much as'; 'as if'): ut (the relation, 'as far as'): hoc (in the place of): instar (as good as, of equal value or weight with): nomine (under the name of). I love you as a friend, amo te ut amicum (so far as you are my friend): tamquam amicum (as much as a friend; as much as if you were my friend): to be as a son to aby, fili loco esse ci: to be to aby as a father, ci parentis numero esse. Its other forms must be used: e. g. we must do as physicians do, medicorum ratio or consuetudo imitanda est. To carry atq off as so much gain, lucri nomine tollere qd. Plato is, in my judgement, as good as all of them together. Plato est mihi instar omnium.—AS with a substantives is here often translated by an adv. or by in modum. To behave as a woman, muliebriter se gerere: to act as a slave, serviliter agere: to obey as slaves, in modum servorum parere: to torture a free citizen as a slave, civem servilem in modum cruciare. || As; AS BEING. Here the property contains also the ground of the preceding statement, and quippe, quippe qui, utpote qui, are used. Quippe is often used with something of irony, and before participles or other attributives only [Democrito, quippe viro erudito, &c.]: quippe or utpote qui mihi take subj. [Pract. Intr. II. 814.] They did not trust their own valour, as being men who had been often routed, non suâ virtute confisi sunt, quippe toties fusi fugatique. || As is often untranslated: e. g. with such verbs as to consider or look upon: ac, this must be looked upon as the greatest evil, hoc maximum malum existimandum est: he is looked upon as a very just man, justissimus vir habetur. || As is also untranslated when—in the character of, or when I was. He dedicated, as dictator, the temple of Solus, which he had vowed when consul, ædem Salutis, quam consul voverat, dictator dedicavit. || AS FOR INSTANCE: ut; velut; veluti. Animals which are born on land, as for instance crocodiles, bestium quæ gignuntur in terrâ, veluti crocodili: even the gods waged wars, as for instance with the giants, dii quoque bella gesserunt, ut cum gigantibus.—Sit vel is used in this sense: raras tuas quidem sed suaves accipio literas: vel (as for instance) quas proxime accepi, quam prudentes, &c. [Pract. Intr. II. 542.]

III) As a particle of time. || As=when: quum. ut. ubi. [Ubi marks a point in time in which something began: ut, an event which was succeeded by another: quum, the coincidence of two facts, so that either both happen at the same point of time, or a momentaneous action introduced by 'as' either happens whilst another is still going on, or is immediately consequent to it. See EXCURS. II. to Grotend's Materials.]—Ut and ubi take the indic. (when no other reason requires the subj.) mihi the perf.—quum also takes indic. of pres. and perf. (and also with the imperf. and pluperf. of repeated actions—as often as); but in simple narrative has the subj. of imperf. and pluperf.—Very often the verb with 'as' is transit. by a participle, which will be in abl. absol. when the two propositions have not the same subject. || AS OFTEN AS: quoties. quum with indic. even of imperf. and pluperf. [Quum quæpiam cohortes ex orbe excesserat, hostes velocissime refugiebant. Cæs.] || AS LONG AS: tam diu—quam or quum diu; usque adeo—quoad,—as relati. quamdiu (e. g. tenuit se uno loco quamdiu fuit hiems)—quoad (all the time until; as long as). || As=whilst, dum, or by participation of pres. || AS SOON AS. See AS, I.

IV) As a causal particle—since: inasmuch as: quoniam (indic.)—quum (subj.): quando; quandoquidem (indic.).—See SINCE.

V) AS TO; AS CONCERNING; AS TOUCHING, &c.: quod attinet ad. quod; stis de ad. As to the book, which your son gave you, quod ad librum attinet, quem tibi filius dabit. As to retaining our liberty, I agree with you, de libertate retinenda tibi assentior. As to (or, as for) Pompeia, I would have you write, if you think good, quod ad Pompeianum, si tibi videtur, scribas velim. As to my Tullia, I agree with you, de Tullia meâ tibi assentior. As to your praying that &c., (nam) quod precatus es, ut &c. || As to, before infin. after 'so', 'such', ut; after a neg. or interrog. sentence, ut, or more emly qui (with subj.). No man is so senseless as to believe this, nemo tam delirus est, ut (or qui) hæc credat. [quis potest tam aversus a vero esse,—qui neget, &c.]—As not to, quin. No food is so hard as not to be digested, &c., nullus cibis tam gravis est, quin is—concoquat.

VI) MISCELLANEOUS PHRASES with AS. Be it as it may, utcumque res est or erit.—As was LIKELY; AS WAS SURE TO HAPPEN: id, quod necesse erat accidere.—As PEOPLE SAY, ut dicunt, ferunt, or alunt: ut dicitur, traditur, or fertur. As you observed, &c., id quod dixisti, &c.: as all allow, id quod omnes consentunt, &c.—As QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE, quam celerrime: AS SHORTLY AS POSSIBLE, quam brevissime: AS FAR AS I CAN, quoad ejus facere possum: AS FAR AS POSSIBLE, AS FAR AS CAN BE DONE, quoad ejus feri potest. As it were (softening a strong word, &c.), quasi. As far as appearance goes, ad speciem [e.g. forum adornatum ad speciem magnifico ornatu. C.]. As far as I know, quod sciam. As far as I can with a good conscience, quod salvâ fide et salvo officio possim. But with quantum such limitations are in the indic. [quantum—intelligo.]

BUSYBODY, homo importunus, molestus; ardeus homo occupatus in otio, gratis anhelans (see PLEAS II. 3).

BUT, at. sed. verum or vero. autem (at has an adversative, sed a corrective or limiting force: verum or vero affirms the truth or importance of an assertion; autem carries on a train of thought already begun: it is the weakest adversative particle). — It is to be observed that autem and vero stand after one or more words, the rest at the beginning of the sentence. — But ON THE OTHER HAND, at (especially before personal names and pronouns): BUT AT LEAST, BUT AT ALL EVENTS, at, at certe or tamen. — BUT in objections anticipated (— but it may be said, or urged, at, at enim, at vero. — 'TRUE, BUT' (in concessions), at, at enim (the concession being followed by another consideration that must not be lost sight of). — BUT FORSOOTH (in anticipating objections), at vero, at enim. — BUT (in the minor premises of a syllogism), atqui, aut m. — BUT BEHOLD or LO! ecce autem! — NAY, BUT; NAY, BUT ASSUREDLY, enimvero, verum enimvero. — BUT (when a subject is to be ended or suspended), sed, sive verum: b. enough for to-day, sed—in hunc diem hactenus. — *I DON'T SAY — BUT, non modo—sed; non dicam or non dico—sed; ne dicam or nedum. [Pract. Intr. II. 506—508.] NOT ONLY NOT—BUT EVEN NOT, non modo—sed ne—quidem (when a verb, common to both clauses, is expressed in the second); non modo non—sed ne—quidem. Such a man will not dare, not only to do, but even to think aliquid that is not honorable, talis vir non modo facere, sed ne cogitare quidem quidquam audebit, quod non honestum sit. — NOT THAT—BUT (rejecting one reason and affirming another), non quod—sed; non eo quod—sed; non quo—sed (the last being not only permissible, but of more frequent occurrence than the other forms). — *NOT THAT—NOT, —BUT, non quâ—sed; non quo

non—sed [Pr. Intr. II. 811].—|| BUT YET, BUT HOW-EVER, at, attamen, verum tamen.—PERHAPS—BUT YET, fortasse—verum tamen. With a love of glory too eager perhaps, but yet honorable, amore glorie, nimis arri fortasse, verum tamen honesto (C.).—|| BUT IF,
sin, sin autem, si vero: BUT IF NOT, si non, si minus,
si alter.—|| NOT ONLY—BUT ALSO, non modo—sed etiam or verum etiam; non solum—sed etiam [see Pract. Intr. II. 504, 505], etc sed et (even in Cicero); non tantum—sed etiam. In non tantum—sed or vero etiam, there is never a daunt in the greater to the less;
and this form cannot be used when neither the subject
nor the predicate is common to both sentences.—BUT ON THE CONTRARY, at contra, at enim vero.—BUT RATHER, imo, imo vero, imo enimvero.—|| To be praised with a but, cum exceptione laudari. Without an if, or but, sine ulla mora, haud cunctanter, libentitissime.—BUT is sometimes not expressed in Latin, e.g.
this is thy office, but not mine, hoc tuum est, non meum.

BUT, in the sense of EXCEPT, præter; præterquam;
excepto (& -is); nisi. I saw nobody b. him, præter illum vidi neminem. No one is wise b. the good man, nemo sapiens est, nisi bonus. Nothing b., nihil aliud, nisi (that and nothing else); nihil aliud quam (i. e.
equivalent to that). This happens to none b. a wise man, soli hoc contingit sapienti. I saw no one b. you, te unum vidi. Nothing could bring them into one united people b. law, coalescere in populi unus corpus, nulla re præterquam legibus, poterant. The last b.
one, proximus a postremo. There is nobody here b. I, solus hic sum. What b. I quid aliud nisi or quam?
All b., tantum quod.

BUT, in the sense of ONLY, modo, tantum, solum (tantum properly confines what was said to a certain magnitude, modo to a certain measure or degree, solum to the thing itself, to the exclusion of others).
tantummodo, nonnisi, solus, unus. I saw b. you, te unum vidi. I did b. hear these things, not see them, hæc audivi tantum, non vidi. I will speak, do you b.
hear, loquar, modo audi. If b., dummodo; dum (with subj.). Do b. let him, sine modo. Do b. stay, mane modo. B. too often, sæpius justo; nimium sæpe.
There were b. two ways (two in all), erant omnino finera duo. You have b. the name of virtue in your mouth, nomen tantum virtutis usurpas. He came b.
to-day, hodie primum venit. B. a while ago, non ita pridem, nuper admodum. He is b. twenty years old, non amplius viginti annos natus est. I wanted b.
little that &c., tantum non, &c.; non multum absuit,
quin &c.

BUT THAT (except that if not), nō, nisi; quod nisi!
B. that I fear my father, nō metum patrem. And b.
that he was ashamed to confess, et nisi erubesceret
fateri.—|| After a negative, quin, quō non; in this use
we often drop that.—|| Quin is hardly ever used where, if the rel. and non were used, cuius non or cui non would stand; it is a stand for quo non after an expression of time. The sentence after quin must not contain another relative.—|| No day almost, b. (that) he comes to my house, dies fore nullus est, quin domum meam veniat, or quo domum meam non veniat. There is none b. is afraid of you, nemo est, qui te non metuat. There is none b. may complain, nemo est, quin conqueri possit. There is no doubt b. (that) &c., non est dubium, quin (with subj.). I have no fear b.
I shall write you letters enough, non vereor, ne non scribendo te expleam. None b. (i. e. those who did not), nemo quin, nemo qui non. None b. knows, nemo
est, qui nesciat.—|| Not b. that, non quin, non quia non, with a subj., followed in the subsequent clause by sed quod or sed quia with the indic., or by sed ut with the subj.

BUT, after cannot. I cannot b. &c., facere non possum quin (subj.), or non possum non (with inf.).—
non possum quin is Præca.—|| Cannot b. be &c.,
fieri non potest, ut non or quin &c.

BUT FOR (i. e. were it not for, had it not been for) some person or thing, nisi or ut quod or quod esset, fuisset (abique quod or quod re esset is used by comic writers).—
The bridge would have afforded a way to the enemy b.
for one man, Horatius Cocles, pons iter hostibus dedit, nī unus vir fuisset, H. C. (only in comedy should we and abique uno viro, Horatio Coclitæ, esset.). I would
b. for hurting him, vellem, nī foret ei dānum.

CHILD, a) a human being, without regard to sex and age, but with ref. to the parents; is to be expressed in Latin in sing. by filius (son) or filia (daughter), unless the sentence may be turned in such a manner as to admit the verb nasci.—CHILDREN, liberi, orum; progenies (offspring; descendants). stirps (lit. the stem: both can stand for 'a child', when this is used in a pregnant sense for 'issue', 'offspring'; proles and suboles are poet. in this sense).—natus (for filius), by no means admissible in good prose, any more than sem. nata (for filia) and pl. nati (natus), e. g. natus meus or de nie nata, &c. It is a different thing when we find in Cic. (Leel 8, 27), bestium, quæ ex se natos ita amant, &c. and inter natum et parentes, because here the opposition between the parent and the offspring is intended to be prominently marked out; or whenever natus or nata ex &c. appears as a pure participle, with which filius (or filia) is to be understood, as Nep. Epam. 10, 2: ne tu pejus consulas, qui talem (sc. filium) ex te natum relicturus sis; and again, namque ex me natam (sc. filiam) relinqu pugnā Leucitcam [see the context of the passage]. ¹ The phrase 'to make a conscience,' appears to be used with some difference of meaning; thus, 'we must make a c. in keeping the just laws of superiors' (Jr. Taylor) = 'we must observe them religiously.' But L'Estrange uses: 'to make a c. of betraying for gold,' in the sense of not betraying for gold from a conscientious principle of duty. Locke says, 'we must make c. not to mislead children.' Hence we must consider whether the meaning of 'making a c.' is the making it a point of c. to do the thing in question, or not to do it.

CONTRADICTORILY, repugnanter (C.; but opp. to patienter). contrarie, diverse.

CONTRADICTORY, contrarius.—pugnans, repugnans (of things).—diversus (quite different).—disparatus (in logic, vid. C. de Invent. 1, 28, 42).—obloquens (of persons contradicting). C. things, &c., quæ inter se pugnant, repugnant, sunt contraria (C.): c. assertions, statements, &c., *verba, quæ inter se repugnant or non coherent. C. laws, leges contrariæ (Q.): to be c., inter se pugnare or repugnare.—in maximâ inconstantiâ versari (of opinions, C. N. D. 1, 16, 42).—To issue c. decrees, contrarium decernere atque (paullò ante) decreverat. See CONTRARY.

CONTRADISTINCTION, Crel. by quod ca rei contrarium est; quod a qâ re toto genere disjungo, or disjunctum esse volo; or aliud enim [hoc]—aliud [illud] esse volo. Virtutes in c. lo vices, vitia, quæ sunt virtutum contraria (C.): the refinement of those who reside in towns, in c. to the rudeness of those who live in the country, urbanitas, cui contraria est rusticitas [C. uses the gen. after contrarius]. National law in c. to cities (jus gentium), aliud enim jus gentium, aliud jus civile esse volo. What is right in c. to what is expedient, honesta, quae a commodis non nomine, sed genere toto disjungo or disjungenda sunt (cf. C. de Nat. l. 7, 18).

CONTRADISTINGUISH, non nomine, sed genere toto disjungere (qd a qd re, C. de Nat. l. 7, 15). — quod c. rei contrarium esse volo. — See CONTRADISTINGUITION.

CONTRARIETY, repugnantia, pugna, — discrepan- tia (want of agreement, inconsistency; e. g. script et voluntatis). — (mira) diversitas [C. contrarietas late; Macrobi. Soma. Scip. 2, 14, Sid.].

CONTRARILY; c. to, contra (e. g. to the law, legem). — contrarie. In contrarias partes (in opposite directions): 'to be carried so contrarily' (Locke), distrahi in contrarias partes (C.); contra ea (on the other hand. Not C. but Cæs.).

CONTRARIWISE, ex or e contrario [not vice versâ]. Vid. 'on the CONTRARY.'

CONTRARY, contrarius. — adversus (prop. opp. to one who is looking at it; then impropr. in rhetoric, of notions opposed to each other in the same species; as, sapientia and stultitia. C. Top. 11, 47; but also for contrarius, generally. vid. C. Or. 19, 56 [compared with 39, 135], and Gell. 10, 8). — oppositus (placed opposite; opposed to; of the action; but not in the sense of 'contrary,' 'the opposite.' — C. contraria cum Cicerone appello, quæ barbari opposita, Muret. On the meaning of oppositum and antithesis, see OPPOSITE, a.) — diversus (the diversa will have nothing in common, and go different or even opposite ways from each other; whereas the contraria confront and stand directly opposite to each other; hence, diversa ut etiam contraria, Dôd.). — Ss alienus (a qd re (inconsistent with), disparatus (contradictory, vid. C. Inven. 1, 28, 42). — C. to each other, contrarii inter se. — To be of a c. opinion, dissentire, dissidere a qd or inter se; even here some are of a c. opinion, id ipsum nonnullis secus videtur. On this subject, authors are of c. opinions, discrepat inter scriptores, or (if they are not merely writers, but the great supporters of an opinion) inter auctores. Obs. 'To be c. to althg; is my contra qd esse (e. g. contra naturam, contra officium esse, to be c. to nature, to duty). A c. wind, ventus adversus: to have the wind c., vento adverso navigare; ventus (naviganti) ei adversum tenet: to have c. winds, ventis adversis uti. Every virtue has its c. vice, omni virtuti vitium contrario nomine opponitur (C.). In a c. direction, in contrarias partes (e. g. fluere, to flow back, of streams, C. Dio. 1, 35); contrarie (e. g. procedere, of the stars, C.). — C. contrarius is often followed by ac [Pr. In- trod. ii. 183, 206]: to move in a c. direction to that of the heavens, versari contrario motu atque cœlum. If used as virtually an adverb [fm being referred to the subject, or to the whole affirmation]. My by præter. C. to the laws of God and man, præter jus iasque: c. to a body's wish, præter ea voluntatem: c. to expectation, præter opinionem: c. to one's hopes, præter spem, secus ac speravimus [on contra, see next Obs.]: c. to my wishes, præter optatum meum (e. g. accidit qd). — [C. contra with spem, expectationem, consuetudinem is rare, for præter (Krebs); it is, however, quite Class.; contra opinionem, Cæs. 5; expectatorem, Hirt.; spem, S. L.]: To act c. to, negligere qd (e. g. legem, consuetudinem); migrare qd (e. g. jus civile); to a precept, directions, &c., extra præscriptum egredi; to one's promise, fidem non servare; fidem frangere. Contra is often used with atque or quam and a verb: c. to his expectations, contra atque ratus erat: c. to the opinion he had himself delivered, contra quam ipse censuerat [Hand rejects Herzog's distinction, that contra ac compares, contra quam heightens and excludes]: c. to what is the custom with us, contra atque apud nos.

CONTRARY, used as subst. — contrarium, pars contraria, contraria, pl. [C. diversum, in this sense, belongs to the age of T. On oppositum and antithesis, see TAX OPPOSITE.]: my views are the very c. of these, mihi contra videtur (S. Jug. 85, 1, but Kritiz has contra ea). (1) 'The contrary' is my translated by the adj. contrarius, in concord; it is in the neut. — e. g. huius virtutis contraria est vilitas; silentium contrarium est diffidentia: both C. (2) 'The contrary to what, &c.' is contrarium ac or atque: e. g. to decree the very c. of what he had decreed a little before, contrarium decernere, atque paullo ante decreverat, C. — To do the very c. of what, &c., contra facere ac (atque) or quam. [C. As opposed to an adj., it must be translated by contra: whether he is happy or the c., utrum felix sit, an contra: some things seem probable, others the c., alie res probabiles videntur, alie contra.] On the c., ex contrario. e contrario [C. Görans and Bremi say, that contrario has no authority; that ex contrario is used by C.; e contrario by Np. and Q.; but e contrario is found C. de Fin. 2, 12, 36; ad Herenn. 1, 10, 17; 2, 11, 16. Hand thinks that ex contrario = ex altera parte contraria; e contrario = contra, eol. ii. 631]: contra (on the other hand; on the c.). — contra es (Cæs. L., and esp. Np. who very seldom uses contra alone. Freund.). [C. In many cases, where the antithesis need not be so strongly marked, it is enough to use at, attamen, autem. — Far from — on the c., tantum abest, ut — ut, or (L.) ut contra: whereas on the c., quod contra; as — so on the c. ut — sic contra; ut — sic ex contrario (Cæs. B. G. 7, 30): for on the c., nam contra: but on the c., atqui contra; sed contra; a. contra; or contraque after a neg. (e. g. non enim tui ulla culpa — contraque summa laus, quod, &c., C.): nos only not — but on the c., non modo non — sed contra: acui that — but on the c., non quo — sed contra (e. g. non quo acui — ingenia adolescentium nollem, sed contra ingenia obtundi nolui, C.): and on the c., et contra, contraque, or on the c., vel contra: if on the c., si ex contrario (C.).] On the c. (in answers of dissent), imo. Imo vero, imo enim vero. Imo potius.

CONTRAST, I In painting, architectura, &c., asperitas (relief); sharp c., opp. monotonous smoothness: e. g. quum aspectus ejus scenæ propter asperitatem eblandiretur omnium visus, Plur. 7, 5; ut aspectus propter asperitatem intercolumniorum haberet auctoritatem, Id. 3, 3). — To form a pleasing c., propter asperitatem omnium visus eblandiri, or habere auctoritatem. *gratâ quadam asperitate placere [Civ. gives fm Doer. res inter se pugnantes, contrariæ invicem se excipiunt or mire occurrunt, uch is not very happy].
